

Tuesday.

My dear Mütterlein

I set off so soon that I cannot count upon being able to call upon you before I go, which I should have preferred rather than to write, ^{even} without any of the additional temptations that you held out to me in your note. I am going to spend a month or and about the lakes of Cumberland & Westmoreland, & shall probably see a good deal of Wordsworth, who when he was last in town, very kindly asked me to his house - but ^{say} have taken upon myself that you will be glad to see this invitation. I cannot now ^{him} - & I think I might also accept, as I shall have a ^{have} safely promised that you companion - my friend Grant, would like him. whom I am very glad that you have at last seen. His extreme modesty - for it is not exactly bashfulness - never would let him call upon you before.

Another excellent friend of mine, Crawley, who frequently walks home with Mr Austin from the lecture, would, I am certain, be much pleased by making your acquaintance - though I suppose he was afraid of intruding upon you by coming to the proper side of your door, i.e. the inside. I

I look forward with great pleasure to cultivating a further acquaintance with Mr Empson under your auspices - I know not to what I can be indebted for so very favourable an opinion as that which you mention, except to your mütterlich kindness, which makes you see every thing about me in far brighter colours than those of reality.

I am very happy to hear that Mr Austin is better. I hope Lucy is quite recovered from all ailments. Yours most affectionately,
J. S. Mill.

Mrs. Austin
26 Park Road.
Regent's Park.

Thursday
I. H.

Dear Mütterlein

I know you will never resent me of being indifferent to your company, therefore I will not scruple to tell you that I had rather not come on Friday: there will be too many without me, and one only goes to see people in a crowd when one does not care to see them otherwise, or when one does not venture to refuse - at least that is the case with me.

The attendance at the lectures is rather slack, certainly, but it is chiefly from unlucky accidents. Roeluck has been ill - Crawley, who has the greatest admiration for the lectures & attended regularly last year, has for the last three or four months been dangerously ill of the only serious illness he ever had, & is not even now recovered. Romilly has been overwhelmed with duties inasmuch that he is at this moment failing of one very imperative one, his engagement with Cochrane (no blame to him, however). Graham, ever since his appointment as Medical amirner, has had all his time taken up. Sturt has been always at the House of Commons. Chadwick, latterly, has been engaged by ~~him~~ Mr Bentham's affairs & soon.

I think there may be a class of some ten or a dozen next year among persons whom I myself know, or knew of.

Your question "what can Pelham do here" shows little knowledge of the said Pelham. I should not at all wonder if he became a repentant of yours. There is much good in Bulwer.

Give my love to Lucy - I trust it is not her birthday which I am refusing to celebrate

Yrs John
J. S. M.

Mrs Austin
26 Park Road
Regent's Park.

John Stuart Mill an S. Anpin.
Author of Treatise on Logic - on Polit' Econ' &c &c

India House
8th Feb 7
1876

My dear Mütterlein

Thanks for letting me know when there was an opportunity of writing.
How are you? & how is Mr Austin? I wish much to know. as for me I am much the same as when I last wrote - neither better nor worse - & I do not find that I get better.
However the medical men think it is a very trifling

Sincerely Anpin.

ailment. While it lasts, indeed in India - where however, it cripples me. Cameron is going on very for many things. My father ^{is} ~~is~~ factually & there is also is in statu quo or a prospect of his being nearly so - & will not be able to do some good.
get rid of the remains of I send you a copy of his complaint till the the review. Now that warm weather. My brother von Raumer is done James goes to Deal tonight (of which by the bye to ~~be~~ join his ship in I have asked Buller to the Downs. News of any review) would not you do other not I have none - something for it?
as to anybody in whom you take interest. ~~at~~ Now is there anything doing by anybody - except

You have heard I suppose from Bickersteth all the circumstances attending his appointment - which is the worth all other things put together that the things have done - though they ought to have done it long before.

Henry Taylor is printing a little book on Statesmanship in which I have no doubt there will be good things, & I should think some weak ones.

I hardly ever go out now - so you will not wonder that I have so little to tell

yours affectionately
J. S. Mill

STAATS-BIBLIOTHEK
BERLIN

My Dear Mrs. Norton

I had rather come some day when I can have more of you to myself. Chuse any day which is most convenient to yourself. I go nowhere
- so that all days are alike for me, Wednesday excepted, when I am confined here. Saturdays & Sundays, as you know, I am at this season out of town.

It is one of my misfortunes that I see so little of you. Do come to the India House as often as you are near it - I have a few minutes to spare.

Affectionately yours

J. Mill

E. J. House

21st June

J. H.
Friday

My dear Carlyle

Can you & Mrs Carlyle come to Kensington on Wednesday?
not to dinner if you would rather not, but as early in the evening as you can.

Barclay Fox & his father & mother & sisters will probably come at some time or other in the evening but I hope you will come whether they do a not.

ever faithfully

J. S. Mill.

John Stewart Mill

(Son of James Mill, chief disciple of Jeremy Bentham)

John Stuart Mill an Carlyle.

Carlyle.

Thomas Carlyle Esq.
5 Cheyne Row
Chelsea

STAATS-BIBLIOTHEK
BERLIN.

July. 1843.

My dear Carlyle

I send what I can
viz. Bentham, my father Bentham, & four others which you can send if you think Varnhagen will care for them. viz

Ram Mohun Roy, Sir Alex. Burnes, Lord Lansdowne & Palmerston

Yours ever

J. S. Mill

J. S. Mill an Carlyle.

Feb. 1843.

Carlyle.

